Past

Despite opening a new branch in Marshall this year, Sabretech has been a business rooted in Hillsdale for about eight years. Sabretech, 154 Lewis St., opened in 2003 and looks to be a one-stop shop for Hillsdale's computing needs. But the decision to open in Hillsdale was for more reasons than just business, said co-owner Brad Cochran. "It's where we're all from," he said.

Present

The store currently sells everything from parts to systems, Cochran said, and also can help people set up networking and off-site backups. But Cochran said the business offers more than just parts and repairs. "(People come for) the quality service and quick response times," he said.

Sabretech's two newest initiatives are their off-site backups and their managed services. The backups allow businesses and residential customers to have their entire system loaded on to one of Sabretech's servers each night, in case of emergency. The managed service is a way for Sabretech to oversee a company's servers at their request. "We become the on-site IT department for a business or company," said co-owner Sam Sallows. "We maintain their system." Sallows said they're trying to emphasize the managed services and off-site backups to a few

Future

After opening the Marshall branch in February, Cochran said the focus isn't on expanding more. "Right now, we're just trying to get these two running," he said.
